church was opened for services Sunday morning, and then it caused much excitement among the congregation. It was believed by some that some of the boys of the town perpetrated the act, and others thought that as the congregation was somewhat divided in opinions as to whether the pastor had done right in refusing to permit the sale of beer at a church picnic, that may be one of the younger men had committed the deed by placing the keg and the glass on the altar more as a joke than anything else.

The people of Millstadt generally are aroused over the occurrence, and have taken sides in the matter. Some look upon it as a joke, while others do not. The action of the Board of Trustees is commented upon variously.

GLOVES PREVENT ELECTROCUTION. Nitroglycerin Injected Into Injured Miner to Revive Him.

Heavy leather gloves, which Henry Bethmann, a miner at the Maule mine, on the Rock road, wore, probably saved him from being electrocuted in the mine yesterday. As it was, he was burned so badly that he will be laid up for several vecks. Doctor Wangelin, who attended him, had to use nitro-glycerin as a hypddermic injection to restore the man to explained manner, tripped and fell over on it.

The shock rendered the man unconscious, and when he was found some time later electric sparks played about the tips of his fingers and his toes, which rested on the floor of the mine as he hung across the exposed feed wire.

This completed the circuit, and a big portion of the high voltage of electricity was passing through his body.

When taken to the top it was found that his hands and feet were seared to the bone, and his abdomen was also badly burned. It was at first thought that he was dead, but he revived after Doctor Wangelin spent some time in working on him

Roberts arrived in Belleville yesterday morning on a freight train from New Orleans. He had a couple of dollars, but he thought that he would need this money for other purposes than buying shoes, so he stole a pair from Julius Huff's store on East Main street. Several persons saw the man take the shoes and also saw him board a street car bound for St. Louis.

The West End Police Station was notified, and Charles Wade, connected with the department, boarded the car and arrested the tramp, who had wrapped the shoes in a piece of newspaper. Roberts was taken before Justice Wangelin, who turned him over to the County Court.

Judge Hay heard the case and found the man gulity. He sentenced him to thirty days in the jail. The hands on the clock had moved over a space of just fifty minutes since Roberts committed the theft until he began his jail sentence.

HORSE MISSING SINCE DEDICATION. Now East Side Dealers Wonder Who the Horse Is On.
A tale of a horse has been going the rounds of East Side horsemen and is at the expense of Wolfort & Co. of Belleville and Colonel John I. Martin of St. Louis. The animal belonged to the horse men and was rented for the World's Fair Dedication parade, after which it was lost and has not yet turned up. A demand for the value of the horse was made, but it is said that it was turned over to General Clarke, who, it is said, will satisfy the claim of the horsemen. After the parade the horse with others was turned into a paddock at the World's Fair grounds. When called for the shims could not be found. The matter was re-ported to the owners of the horse, who promptly sent a bill for its value.

FATHER FINLAY OF MOSELY'S COMMISSION VISITS ST. LOUIS.

The Reverend Thomas Finlay, S. J., 1 ... professor of political economy at Univer-sity College, Dublin, and member of Alfred Mosely's British Educational Commission, which left England on October to study the American modes of fostering commercial, industrial and intellectual life, spent yesterday at St. Louis Univer-

Professor Finlay came here from Indianapolis, Ind., where he left the body of the commission, which departed for Pittssion's arrival in this country, that body has been industriously touring the larger cities east of the Mississippi River, visiting all sorts of educational institutions with the intention of culling whatever good there is in American ways to im-prove the methods in vogue across the good there is in American ways to improve the methods in vogue across the water.

Alfred Mosely, who is a South African diamond prince, made most of his money while he was associated with Cecil Rhodes, and now, in the hope of saving the British Empire, in the industrial competition with America and its enterprising mechanics and manufacturers, who have invaded the British markets, he has come forward to try to stem the tide by setting at the tession for American success.

According to Father Finlay, the greatest disorder and alarm exist in England on account of the recent influx of American workmen and products. The former have taken the place of English workmen at greater rates of salary on account of the manner in which they expedite the work, while the products of America undersell the English goods in the home markets.

In every important work of engineering, says Father Finlay, in which the light against time is to be made, America gets the contract. The building of the army bridges at Egypt and Burman was an example.

"American capital is coming to Engbridges at Egypt and Burmah was an example.

"American capital is coming to England at an alarming rate." he said. "This capital is buying the factories and running them along American lines and driving the Englishman from the markets. As an illustration of that, take the Diamond Match Company. They now control the entire match business of the British isles. Bryant & May formerly furnished this comparatively small article, but now they are virtually out of the business on account of the American competition. It is the same in all other branches.

"Prior to their advent the English Bricklayers Union allowed one man to lay but 450 bricks a day. The Westinghouse people did not care how much money they spent for bricklayers, but they demanded that more work be done. The result was that their wage figures were so alluring that the workmen description house and sigued under American bosses, with the result hat now the English workman lays 1,300 brick a day."

Redmond was charged with killing William Thurman at a moonlight picnic in North Alton on June 7. He was indicted the same week, and his trial took place a couple of weeks ago. On October 28 the jury returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment at fourteen years in the Penitentiary.

There were no more faithful attendants during the proceeding than Mrs. A. M. Bushnell of Alton and her daughter, and they watched its progress from beginning to end. When the adverse verdict was returned both wept.

They began to plan a way to avoid the incarceration of Redmond. Mrs. Bushnell informed his attorney, Colonel J. J. Bprnholt, that she had knowledge of members of the jury conversing about the case with E. D. Thurman and R. H. Parker during the trial.

This fact was entered with the motion for a new trial, and, in consequence, the jury will have to individually explain their actions.
